

In Harmony Lambeth

What is In Harmony Lambeth?

A government project inspired by a groundbreaking music project in Venezuela designed to improve children's lives through music. The Department for Children, Schools and Families has provided funds for three projects in Liverpool, Norwich and Lambeth. The Lambeth project is in partnership with Southbank Centre and Amicus Horizon.

What will happen?

Children will be given a chance to learn music and a variety of instruments in an intense, fast-track programme. They will form bands and orchestras and take part in projects and public performances in Stockwell, at Southbank Centre and other venues in London. There will also be holiday courses and music days open to all.

Who is it for?

The project is aimed at young children between the ages of 4 and 6 initially, but will also involve older children and their whole families. Children from Lansdowne Green Estate or who attend local schools can take part. The project is free but will need a lot of commitment.

Where will it happen?

Classes will take place in the Community Hall and other venues on the estate, and in surrounding schools and venues.

When will it start?

Lessons and tryouts for the first group of 100 children will start in the summer term, on the Estate and in some local schools. Further groups will start in September.

How can I get involved?

Children can be part of this exciting project whether or not they already play a musical instrument. This high profile project will also need adult volunteers to assist with a range of activities.

All updates will be posted on www.lambethmusic.co.uk, at the Lansdowne Green housing office and local schools.
